

The original Star Wars 3 3/4" action figure series was produced by Kenner from 1977-1979. The first packaged figures were released on 12 Back cards, defined as cards which picture only the first 12 figures on the reverse side. The first release of 12 figures was followed by a 2nd release of 9 additional figures, of which Boba Fett was the last released, due to the fact that he was initially offered as a mail-away figure only. The last 9 figures can be found on either 20 or 21 back cards, again the back number referring to the number of figures pictured on the reverse side. During these initial years, Kenner also released an assortment of creatures, vehicles, and play-sets to accompany the 3 3/4" line of action figures. While some picture variants and other minor variations exist, the packaging style of the Star Wars series is virtually the same throughout the first several years. In addition to the 3 3/4" toy line, Kenner also produced numerous other Star Wars products for children.

The most popular items included 12" dolls, die-cast vehicles, puzzles, board games, and several other accessories.

In 1980, Kenner began production of a new toy series to coincide with the release of the second movie titled Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back. These toys were branded with the new ESB logo and were produced from 1980-1982. This series included several new additions, including the Micro Collection and mini-rigs, and was the final series for 12" dolls and die-cast vehicles. Many of the toys from the original Star Wars series were produced in multiple ways during the ESB series; one which took the Star Wars toy and artwork and simply changed the package logo to the new ESB logo, and the other a change to either a newly designed toy or a completely re-designed package. The ESB 3 3/4" action figure series consisted of 8 different card backs, the 21 back (used only for the re-release of the original 21 figures), the 31 and 32 backs (used for the first 11 figures to be released, of which Yoda was the last), and finally the 41, 45, 47, and 48 backs (used to package later releases from the ESB series).

In total there were 29 new figures released in the ESB series, making a total of 50 figures in the line. Because the original C-3PO and R2-D2 were discontinued upon the release of updated versions, the last ESB card backs picture only 48 figures on the reverse side of the card. Many ESB-issue original Star Wars toys were re-released in very limited quantities and regions, so certain ESB package variations, both carded and boxed, can be extremely rare.

In 1983, Kenner began production of the third and final 80s installment of the Star Wars trilogy. The movie was originally titled Star Wars: Revenge of the Jedi, an early title which can be found on certain ESB production toys and later on pre-production toys meant for the upcoming series. The title was eventually changed to Return of the Jedi, which is the title printed on the ROTJ series of toys produced from 1983-1984. Along with the 3 3/4" action figures, creatures, vehicles, and playsets, Kenner also released plush toys, board games, and a few additional accessories for the ROTJ series. As with the transition from Star Wars to ESB, several toys can be found in multiple ways in the ROTJ series; one which took the ESB toy and artwork and simply changed the package logo to the new ROTJ logo, and the other a change to a completely re-designed package. The ROTJ 3 3/4" action figure series consists of 4 different card backs, the 48 back (used only for the re-release of the original 48 figures), the 65 back (used for the first 17 figures to be released), and finally the 77 and 79 backs (used to package later releases from the ROTJ series, the last of which were Lumat and Paploo). In total there were 31 new figures released in the ROTJ series, making a total of 81 figures in the line. As with certain ESB package variations, many ROTJ package variations of the transition variety can be quite rare and valuable.

Since Return of the Jedi was to be the final movie of its time, Kenner designed and released the Power of the Force series in 1984-1985 to try and revitalize the series by featuring new products inspired by any movie in the trilogy. While the line consisted mostly of 3 3/4" action figures and vehicles, it also introduced collector coins to children as an added bonus for purchasing a figure or mailing in the proof of purchase off of retail packages.

By 1986 Kenner had temporarily abandoned manufacturing toys based on the Star Wars trilogy. They did however produce toys based on the Droids and Ewoks cartoon series. These toys consisted of 3 3/4" action figures, vehicles, collector coins, and a few other accessories, and were produced for only one year. At the end of 1986 the series was cancelled, leaving a second series of both Droids and Ewoks toys forever as prototypes which would never be released. This would mark the end of an era which was not to return in force until 1995...

Complete Set of 16 Star Wars & ESB Carded 3-Packs

Vintage Rarities

AFA 85 Average

Starting Bid: $100,000 Estimate: $150,000-$200,000

1 of 5 Known Complete Sets • Best of 5 Complete Sets in the World

There are many carded Star Wars figures which are quite rare to find in specific packaging or with a specific variation, but by far the rarest and most sought after action figure set in the world is the set of 16 three-packs from Star Wars and Empire Strikes Back. These 'holy grail' toys were produced three per year in 1978, 1980, 1981, and 1982, with four produced in 1979. They were released in such limited quantities that most people today don't ever remember seeing even one of them at a retail location while they were available. They are in fact so rare that only five complete sets of 16 are known to have been pieced together in the last 26 years. Of those five complete sets known, the set offered here for sale is by far the nicest and highest graded set in the world. Each and every three-pack ranges from an AFA 80 to an AFA 90 and is still unpunched. It's truly a feat to complete a set of 16 three-packs in any condition. What is offered for sale in this auction is without a doubt, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity!

Lot 1307

Complete Set of 31 Special Offer Vehicles & Playsets

Vintage Rarities

C-8 NRFB Average Condition

Starting Bid: $50,000

Estimate: $75,000-$100,000

1 of 2 Known Complete Sets

Highest Condition Set

A special offer vehicle & playset collection is to Star Wars vehicles and playsets what a three-pack set is to carded action figures. It is simply one of the rarest and most highly sought after sets in the world. The term 'special offer' refers to a sticker or printed offer added to what would otherwise be a standard vehicle or playset in order to increase its value and appeal by advertising that it comes with a free figure, figures, background, or other extra toy. These toys were usually released in limited quantities and at select department stores between 1978 and 1982. Much like three-packs, they were so rare while in production that many people never saw them in the four years they were at retail. This particular set offers a complete run of special offer items and includes 31 toys; 5 larger vehicles with a 3 3/4" action figure, 8 mini-rigs with a 3 3/4" action figure, 3 larger vehicles with a cardboard backdrop, 1 playset with a 3 3/4" action figure, 3 die-cast and 4 micro series toys with cardboard backdrops, 2 cases with three 3 3/4" action figures each, 1 display stand with six 3 3/4" action figures, and 4 other toys with miscellaneous special offers. There are only two complete sets known to exist, with this being the nicer of the two. This is an opportunity which is very unlikely to present itself ever again.

The Greatest Action Figure on Earth (with excerpts from theswca.com)

If the loose Rocket Fett first shot is the 'holy grail' of Star Wars collecting, then what is the carded Rocket Fett? It's hard to believe that an actual carded version of this legendary prototype was displayed at Toy Fair 1979 by Kenner, and that this sample has managed to survive all these years. The card is actually a Photostat image that was glued to a cardboard backer. Upon careful inspection, you will notice that the image of Boba Fett and the fireball are shown at a slightly different scale than they are on the regular carded version. But perhaps more importantly, the fireball on this early mock-up is a totally different piece of airbrushed artwork than the one shown on the production blister card. Also, note that there is no text on the fireball, and that certain portions of the Boba Fett image, which are not visible on the production card, are here unobscured.

You might also be able to tell that this card is the product of a type of mock-up procedure, in which graphic elements were cut out and pasted carefully onto some kind of ground (yes, sometimes the folks at Kenner used the same techniques as custom figure makers when creating these prototypes). Then, the entire thing was photographed to make it appear more unified, and the resulting Photostat was applied to a cardboard backer. You can actually see a remnant of this cut-and-paste technique in the "Ages 4 and Up" text at the top of the card, which actually retains the rectangular border marking where it was cut out.

After years of storage the bubble began loosening a little. When the original owner read about the legendary Rocket Fett in Steve Sansweet's "From Concept to Screen to Collectible" book he wanted to see if his specimen was rocket-firing. Since the bubble was open at the top, he simply slid it out and saw that the figure was indeed the coveted prototype. The contoured plastic piece visible inside the bubble was made to hold the figure in place. It fits perfectly around his backpack.

The action figure itself is of the later "J-Slot" type, which makes sense, as the J-Slot is known to be the version of Rocket Fett which made it closest to being released. As everyone and their uncles should know by this point, the rocket-firing Boba Fett was never commercially available in stores or as a mail-away, carded or loose. The small tab on the slot also has a tiny crack, so it's quite possible that this was once a test specimen, as Kenner testing technicians broke many of the tabs as they tested the figures for safety. Since the thin plastic broke so easily it was a safety hazard and further added to the figure's ultimate downfall.

The original owner obtained this piece from the 1979 Toy Fair display, but when he first brought it to the attention of collectors he had no way to verify his story. All that could be verified was that he once worked for a company that had good reason to send him to Toy Fair in the first place. As these things happen, word spread among collectors and the owner of some old Toy Fair slides was able to supply the proof needed to confirm his story. A slide which had turned up previously from an ex-Kenner model maker who had ties to Toy Fair provided the necessary evidence to authenticate this important piece of history. Nobody had really noticed the Boba Fett in the photo until recently. Amazingly, this image from the 1979 Toy Fair shows this very same carded Rocket Fett sitting happily on the display floor. It should be stressed here that this isn't a similar carded Rocket Fett visible in the picture; it's the exact same figure as the one we're offering for sale in this auction. This is simply the most significant Star Wars prototype ever to surface!
